CLUTTON UNION WORKHOUSE

Brief history

One of the intended objectives of the Poor Law Amendment Act of 1834 was to remove the onus of raising and collecting poor rates and the provision of poor relief by individual parishes. By grouping together all the parishes in the district into a Poor Law Union and imposing a central and uniform system it was hoped that much duplication of effort could be avoided and overall costs would be reduced. The need to remove chargeable paupers from one parish to another in the same district could also be obviated. In addition, the erection of a centralised purpose built workhouse in the Union, to replace the many dilapidated buildings that housed the poor in individual parishes, was expected to benefit everyone. To keep a tighter control of paupers, the system of granting outdoor relief, to persons living in their own homes, was terminated and thenceforth paupers faced the choice of either being admitted to the workhouse if they wanted relief or making do as best they could with the help of friends and family.

The intentions were laudable but within a year or two there were widespread complaints that poor rates had risen considerably, there was bureaucratic waste and unnecessary relief was being paid to paupers who took advantage of the fact that the Union staff did not know their true circumstances as well as their own parish officers did. The iniquity of forcing applicants on short term relief to enter the workhouse was sensibly stopped and payment of outdoor relief was resumed after a few years.

Clutton Union came into being on 2nd February 1836, when the first election of Guardians took place. The first meeting of guardians took place the following day, when Captain George Treweeke SCOBELL was elected Chairman and John REES-MOGG Clerk, an appointment which the latter subsequently shared jointly with his brother William.

Clutton Union covered the following 29 parishes and tithings:

| | | |
|----------------|---|--|
| Cameley | Farrington Gurney | Publow |
| Camerton | High Littleton (& Hallatrow) | Radstock |
| Chelwood | Hinton Blewett | Stanton Drew |
| Chew Magna | Litton | Ston Easton |
| Chew Stoke | Midsomer Norton | Stowey |
| Chilcompton | Nempnett Thrubwell | Timsbury |
| Clutton | Norton Hawkfield (pt. Norton Malreward) | Ubley |
| Compton Martin | Norton Malreward | West Harptree |
| East Harptree | Paulton | Widcombe (S. Widcombe pt. |
| Farmborough | Pensford (St. Thomas in Pensford) | Hinton Blewett, N. Widcombe pt. Chewton Mendip) |

After purchasing a suitable field from the Earl of WARWICK and Joseph ROSSITER, the guardians commissioned Jesse GANE, architect of Evercreech, to design a workhouse for the common use of the parishes in the Union. On 9th September 1836, the guardians contracted with James PARFITT of Clutton and Richard KENNARD of East Harptree to build a workhouse at a cost of £4,965 and complete it within 12 months. GANE supervised the construction. The workhouse was situated in an attractive location on the south side of Eastcourt Road, below Cloud Hill, from whence came the building stone, extracted from the quarry on the opposite side of the road. The workhouse lay just inside Clutton parish, at a point close to the boundaries with Cameley and High Littleton parishes.

The workhouse, incorporating an infirmary and school, opened towards the end of 1837. It was apparently intended to cater for up to 400 inmates originally but generally held less than half that number at any one time. The 1841 Census revealed 145 inmates with 6 staff and fifty years later there was still only 144 inmates and 5 staff. An Inspector's report in 1909 stated that there were beds for 172 inmates and all were occupied.

The inmates were a mixed bunch. Some were short term residents, who were destitute as a result of being out of work through sickness, injury or lay-off. These included many unmarried mothers, who were confined in the workhouse. A large proportion of inmates were too old to work or feeble-minded or had no family able or willing to look after them. The workhouse also provided food and temporary accommodation for a large number of vagrants and itinerants. For instance, in the half-year to Lady Day 1913, no less than 545 tramps and vagrants passed through the workhouse. In 1918, a few German prisoners of war worked in the workhouse gardens and resided in the workhouse, while in the following year a number of vagrant discharged soldiers and sailors were admitted.

Responsibility for Poor Law Unions rested with the Poor Law Commission until 1847, when the latter was succeeded by the Poor Law Board. In 1871 the Local Government Board assumed control until 1919, when the Ministry of Health took over. The last meeting of the guardians was held at Cambrook House on 28th March 1930, three days before the nationwide dissolution of all 643 Poor Law Unions. Cambrook House was then transferred to Somerset County Council under the control of the Frome Area Guardians Committee. It subsequently served as a Public Assistance Institution, hospital and old people's home until it finally shut its doors on 7th June 1967.

With the passage of time the paupers' lot gradually improved. In 1908 the old age pension was introduced and Labour Exchanges were set up a year later. Children were ordered to be removed from the workhouse and arrangements made for them to be boarded out. In 1913 union workhouses were to be restyled Poor Law Institutions, to remove some of the stigma attached to the name workhouse. Clutton Union Workhouse was renamed Cambrook House Institution in 1919. Many of the provisions of the Poor Law continued until 1948, when the Welfare State was established.

Registers

Amongst the many records, which the workhouse was obliged to keep, were registers of births and deaths. The latter register, deposited at Somerset Record Office under ref. D/G/CL 69/1, runs from 15th October 1838 to 16th February 1927 and covers 1,681 deaths. In view of the type of inmates accommodated, it is not surprising that there were so many deaths at the workhouse. In 1844 there were 37 deaths, whilst 35 were recorded in 1849 and 1915. Although the death register ends in February 1927, the birth register continued for a few years after this.

CLUTTON UNION WORKHOUSE DEATH REGISTER 1838–1927 & INDEX

There was provision in the Death Register for recording: Number in Relief List (generally ignored), Date of Death, Name, Age and To what Parish belonging. From 1915 onwards, the cause of death was recorded also. During 1874 the number of years the deceased resided in the workhouse was recorded, whilst in 1879/80 deaths from a measles epidemic were noted.

There was no cemetery at the workhouse and as a rule the deceased were removed for burial in the parish to which they belonged. The Workhouse Master's Report & Journal demonstrates typical arrangements made for burial, e.g.

June 10th 1842 – “The Committee are of opinion that it is not necessary to have a hearse to take Martha FORD's child to High Littleton Church, it being only about 5 wks. old & could be carried by a woman.”

– Decision of Guardians - “To be taken by 2 women.”

May 3rd 1844 – “The Minister of High Littleton fixed 4 o'clock for the burial of Josiah DURY; the funeral left the house at 3 o'clock on Monday.”

Transcription

The accuracy of the information recorded in the workhouse death register is variable. A number of parish burial registers have been examined, to compare details with those recorded in the workhouse register. Whilst one might expect to find some surnames spelt slightly differently, it was surprising to find the deceased with a completely different christian name in a few cases. However, the biggest discrepancies related to ages at death, where differences of up to 15 years were found between the death register and respective parish burial registers. The greatest discrepancies occurred in earlier years.

In the following transcription original spellings have been faithfully reproduced. On the other hand, in the index, which follows the transcription, the spelling of surnames has been standardised for easier identification, whilst discrepancies in christian names and ages have been noted. It is acknowledged that standardising the spelling of certain names may have resulted in some correct but unusual spelling variants not being immediately apparent. Viewing the full death register transcription and parish burial register is strongly recommended.

In the vast majority of cases the deceased were clearly identified in parish burial registers as having come from Clutton Union Workhouse but there were exceptions. Conversely, a handful of cases were found in burial registers, where the address of the deceased was given as Clutton Union Workhouse, yet no death was recorded in the workhouse death register. This could be due to omissions in the latter register but could also be due to the person concerned being discharged to die in the home of his or her family. The workhouse admission and discharge registers have not been examined to test the latter theory.

INDEX

Note: Rather than sorting names strictly by spelling variants, names have been standardized in this index. Where a christian name recorded in the workhouse death register differs from that shown in the parish burial register, both have been shown as alternatives below.

Where age at death and burial place shown in a burial register differs from that in the workhouse death register, it is shown in italics in [square brackets]. It should be stressed however, that there has not been a comprehensive comparison and that only a sample of burial registers has been taken.

Note: Rather than sorting names strictly by spelling variants, names have been standardized in this index. Where a christian name recorded in the workhouse death register differs from that shown in the parish burial register, both have been shown as alternatives below.

Where age at death and burial place shown in a burial register differs from that in the workhouse death register, it is shown in italics in [square brackets]. It should be stressed however, that there has not been a comprehensive comparison and that only a sample of burial registers has been taken.
